Two Bright Stars

Sadly, the light from two bright stars in the lesbian community has been dimmed since the publication of our last SACWN newsletter

First, on October 1, Jeanne Barnet passed away after suffering a heart attack. As always, her beloved partner of 20 years, Ellie Charlton, was by her side. Jeanne was a courageous person of integrity who found herself thrust into the public spotlight five years ago when she and Ellie were married in a ground breaking Holy Union ceremony performed by the United Methodist church. Although this precedent-setting event split the leadership of the church, it buoyed the spirits and resolve of gays and lesbians throughout the nation. Jeanne's kindness and compassion enhanced the lives of all who knew her, and her presence will be greatly missed not only by her many friends and loved ones, but by our entire community.

Then, on November 2, Gail Lang lost a battle with stomach cancer. Diagnosed as terminal in early October and given only a short time to live, Gail continued to do what she always did - she opened her heart and her home to her numerous friends. Gail was a superb community activist who, among many other things, was the driving force behind the establishment of The Lavender Library (LLACE). In addition, she spearheaded the effort that resulted in the first-ever GLBT display in the rotunda of our State Capitol. Although her life was cut tragically short by cancer, Gail, with her boundless energy, was able to accomplish much more than most of us will ever dream of. Gail not only dreamed -- she was among those remarkable few who are able to bring their dream to fruition. She will be missed more than words can express.

In a brief time, our community has lost two strong women, the caliber of whom we are unlikely to see again any time soon. Perhaps the best tribute each of us can give them is to stand up and be counted whenever the opportunity presents itself, and to give more of ourselves and our time on behalf of efforts to better our community.

Lambda Letters Project Mission Statement

www.lambdaletters.org

Their mission statement is to urge elected officials to support legislation to end discrimination and to enable all people to gain full and equal access to education, health care, and the economic opportunities of this nation. The primary focus is on lesbians, gays, bisexuals, transgenders, the intersexed, people living with or affected by HIV/AIDS, people of color and women.

How Do They Accomplish This?

They inform members of the issues and then help people write, E-mail, FAX, and phone elected official urging them to do the right thing. In 2002 our members sent almost 218,000 letters and E-mail messages to elected officials.

In just the first four months of 2003 Lambda Letters delivered over 66,000 letters and e-mail messages to elected officials. This is about 12,000 more than was delivered at the same time last year. Here are some comments from legislators about the work that you and Lambda Letters do together:

"Lambda Letters' activities have often been a crucial factor in determining whether a particular bill passes or fails." (Senator Sheila Kuehl, D-Los Angeles)

Massachusetts First State in Nation to Grant Same-Sex Couples the Right to a Civil Marriage

From Human Rights Campaign website

The Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court ruled today that same- and opposite-sex couples must be given equal civil marriage rights under the state constitution. The ruling in Goodridge et al. v. Department of Public Health makes the state the first in the nation to grant same-sex couples the right to a civil marriage license. Ruling that civil marriage in Massachusetts means "the voluntary union of two persons as spouses, to the exclusion of all others," the Court allowed the Legislature 180 days to change the civil marriage statutes accordingly.

"Today, the Massachusetts Supreme Court made history," said Elizabeth Birch, executive director of the Human Rights Campaign. "This ruling will never interfere with the right of religious institutions - churches, synagogues and mosques - to determine who will be married within the context of their respective religious faiths. This is about whether gay and lesbian couples in long-term, committed relationships will be afforded the benefits, rights and protections afforded other citizens to best care for their partners and children. This is good for gay couples and it is good for America."

The Boston-based Gay & Lesbian Advocates & Defenders (GLAD) brought the case on behalf of seven gay and lesbian couples after they were denied civil marriage certificates solely because they were same-sex couples.

"GLAD and Mary Bonauto, its leading lawyer, did an outstanding job arguing this case with professionalism and passion. This tremendous victory would not have been possible without their exemplary efforts," said Birch.

The Human Rights Campaign signed onto a "friend of the court" brief in Goodridge to support and further explain the case for extending civil marriage rights to same-sex couples under the state constitution. A variety of other civil rights organizations, religious groups, child welfare experts, family and legal historians and others also either signed or filed briefs of their own in favor of extending civil marriage laws to same-sex couples.

In Memory of Gayle Lang

This is an E-mail written by Gail before she passed on.

October 28, 2003

Over the last 5-7 years this e-mail list has grown and expanded. At first, it was a weekly report on book reviews, topics of discussion and some of my favorite quotes or tidbits of Queer history. Addresses from around the country and even in such far away countries as Argentina and England have been added as the years passed to produce an announcement list for the Lavender Library Archives and Cultural Exchange of Sacramento, Inc. Some of you were there in the beginning when a small group of people came together to explore an idea, a mission and a passion. Now here we are in 2003. Looking back at the accomplishments makes my head spin. *smile.

Some of you have been able to follow the changing format of these LLACE postings with changes in my personal life, therefore format change and life change once again come together. Now it is time to change once more. LLACE blind-copy mailing list/announcement posts will be managed over the following few months by Lira Goff and others who volunteer at LLACE. If you wish to be removed from this list, please reply to info@lavenderexpress.com. Please bear with us through the transition, your ideas energy, efforts would be greatly appreciated.

After going into the emergency room on October 8th, 2003 with symptoms of acid reflux, I was diagnosed with metastatic stomach cancer. Adventures this October have been heart warming, soul-searching, and spent reviewing priorities.

I have been so very fortunate over these years to meet so many of you and to have shared your own personal thoughts about what has evolved here in Sacramento. When we speak of FAMILY, I am reminded of Mispucha --the Hebrew word for family. Mispucha refers not only to the nuclear family unit, but also to a social unit extending past even the most remote cousins.

I am very grateful for all of you.

Financial Focus

Protect Your Financial Records from Disaster

Floodwaters or a fire is headed your way. What should you do? Obviously you and your loved ones need to head for safety. What should you take with you? There are many possibilities, but you should give strong consideration to protecting your financial records. If they get lost or destroyed, it could mean countless headaches for you.

Of course, the best time to think about preserving your financial records is well ahead of any emergency situation. By taking a few simple precautions, you can ensure that your vital financial records and documents will never get washed out, burned up or blown away. Here are a few "preservation" suggestions:

Know where you keep your records and documents.

Keep a file of all your brokerage statements, insurance policies, annuity contracts, bank accounts, financial planning materials and any other financial paperwork you may have. If you know exactly where everything is - and you keep it all in one easily accessible location - you won't have to scramble around for your papers when you have to leave in a hurry.

Minimize the papers you keep.

When it comes to collecting paperwork, we all have different tendencies. If you're a saver, then you might get nervous if you don't hold on to every scrap of paper, every letter, every statement. But if you're a "purger", then you might look at something once, and then toss it. In terms of maintaining your financial records, it's good to be somewhere in between. Save just those documents that you feel are really essential, and get rid of the rest. Too much clutter will make it hard for you to grab the things you need in an emergency.

Computerize as much as you can.

Whenever it's possible, put your important financial information on your personal computer. If you've got the equipment and the know-how to scan documents into your computer, that's great. Even if you don't, you can do something as simple as creating a document and typing in all your important financial information. However you enter your financial information on your computer, be sure to back it up on a diskette or a CD. Both are extremely portable, so they won't slow you down when you need to move fast.

Don't keep everything in the house.

If you have particularly important documents, such as your will or your living trust arrangements, you may want to consider keeping them in a safe deposit box in a bank. Your attorney or accountant probably has copies of these documents, but it is always best to err on the safe side.

By taking these simple steps, you can avoid having a natural disaster destroy your personal "paper trail". However, if worse comes to worse and you can't get your documents out of harms way, there is still no need for panic. Sooner or later, you could probably replace just about everything that is lost. So pay the most attention to preserving what's truly irreplaceable - the lives of you and your loved ones.
